Beyond the pier, numerous streets and everyday locations in Brighton and Hove were transformed into Georgia's world. Many of the scenes depicting Georgia's school life and her explorations of the town were filmed in and around these vibrant urban areas. While the fictional "Ashworth Comprehensive" is a creation of the books, the filmmakers used existing schools and streetscapes to give the film a sense of authenticity. This is a common technique in filmmaking, using the real-world charm of a location to enhance the fictional narrative.
