In 1914, the primary alliances were: * The Triple Entente: Primarily consisting of France, Russia, and Great Britain. * The Triple Alliance: Comprising Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy. However, these alliances were not always as solid as they appeared. Italy, for example, would eventually join the Allied powers. Emerging Nations and Contested Territories

The map of 1914 also reflects the ongoing shifts in power and the emergence of new national identities. The Balkans, in particular, were a hotbed of nationalist aspirations. The disintegration of the Ottoman Empire had created a power vacuum, and newly independent nations like Serbia, Greece, Bulgaria, and Romania were vying for influence and territory. Each of the major powers on the 1914 map had its own set of ambitions and anxieties: * Germany: Sought to assert its dominance and expand its colonial reach. * Austria-Hungary: Feared the rise of nationalism within its borders and saw Serbia as a direct threat. * Russia: Saw itself as the protector of Slavic peoples and aimed to expand its influence in the Balkans. * France: Sought to regain its former prestige and was wary of German power. * Great Britain: Concerned with maintaining the balance of power in Europe and protecting its vast empire.
